Why Belong?

Are you one of those people who enjoys taking pictures but you feel they lack that certain pizzazz you've seen in other people's photos? Do you find that your camera sits around for months on end because you have trouble finding the enthusiasm to get out there and shoot? Or do you have a lot of fantastic shots you would like to share with others or find out how they really stand up? The Kingston Photographic Club could be your solution!

The Club usually meets on the first and third Mondays from mid-September through mid-May. It offers a varied program of guest speakers, club speakers, slide shows of photography from across the country and around the world, an annual exhibition, print and digital image competitions, a regular newsletter (Camera Capers) and the opportunity to discuss your problems and successes with like-minded people. As well, there are specialty groups within the Club that meet separately to delve deeper into their own particular interests. Field trips and seminars are organized to allow members to get out and do some shooting with a specific purpose in mind or learn how the experts do it. There is access, through our library and newsletter, through magazines, books, competitions and exhibitions, world-wide photographic tours, discounts and product information.

Practice makes perfect! This applies to photography just like anything else. Photographers who excel at their art are those who are out there at every opportunity; learning from others, learning by teaching others and learning from their own mistakes. The Kingston Photographic Club gives you the opportunity to do all of these things and more for your membership fee. Come to a meeting or contact one of our executive for information on how to join and improve your photography.

More information about the club and activities, may be found on the club website: www.kingstonphotographicclub.ca.
